Review:

Beautifully meditative compositions that are much more affecting than what gets classified as trance or ambient music these days; Land of the Buddhas is required listening for those wanting a multicultural, musical thesis that engages both mind and body.

Artist Biography:

Chinmaya was born in Kent, England in 1954. After attending Art College, Chinmaya began his world travels that led him through Afghanistan to India, with watercolors and Spanish guitar in hand. Chinmaya dedicated the next thirteen years to the study of Indian classical music on the sarod, both in London and at the Osho Commune in Pune, India. Over the years Chinmaya has released numerous albums with New Earth, and continues to create music from his current home in Goa, India.

Album Description:

New Earth has collected my most treasured pieces for Land of the Buddhas. From the upbeat and groovy (Chance Finding and Bhairavi), to the moody and meditative (Full Moon); the touching and heartfelt (Gir Forest) to the soaring and inspiring (Natrani); and from the Western (Right Samadhi) to Hindustani classical (Shivranjani) these tracks will take you through a range of instruments and will allow you to travel through my cherished memories of India. If you're one of the many people I met who have one or two of my albums and don't know which to buy next, THIS is the answer! If you enjoy listening to this collection even half as much as I enjoyed making them – you are blessed indeed! Land of the Buddhas is all inspired by my love for India.
